

Chris Miller Joins Paladina Health as Chief Executive Officer

DENVER, Jan. 12, 2016 /PRNewswire-USNewswire/ -- Paladina Health, a direct primary care provider and subsidiary of DaVita HealthCare Partners, announced today that Chris Miller has joined the company as its chief executive officer (CEO). Miller brings 12 years of leadership, strategic analysis and corporate development experience from notable health care organizations.

As CEO, Miller oversees the strategy and growth of Paladina Health and will drive the company's vision of bringing direct primary care to patients across the country. He will also work in partnership with Paladina Health's clinical operations, field operations, population health management and business development teams to ensure Paladina Health provides the highest quality care to its patients.

"We are excited to bring on Chris Miller as CEO of Paladina Health," said Kent Thiry, chairman and CEO for DaVita HealthCare Partners. "His executive leadership, health care operations experience, passion for improving health care and deep belief in the importance of creating a values-driven community are all exceptional."

Prior to joining Paladina Health, Miller founded and served as CEO and Managing Director of Trumpet Behavioral Health, a rapidly growing health care services company serving individuals with autism and developmental disabilities. Here, Miller created a strong clinical team focused on mission and values, developed a successful growth strategy and built the platform and infrastructure to scale the leading business in its industry.

"I am thrilled to join an industry leader focused on continuous innovation and building an integrated primary care model of health care," said Miller. "I look forward to leading Paladina Health and continuing to pioneer this new model of health care which will positively impact many lives and create a more integrated system." Miller received his undergraduate degree at Cornell University and post-graduate Masters in Business Administration at Stanford University.
